WESTFORD.

About Town.

Arthur H. Burnham, one of the large farmers on the border of Parkerville, has fodder corn growing for the silo that measures 12 feet, 4 inches in height. If the usual amount of rainfall had followed it, where would it have been by this time?

George A. Kimball, another prosperous farmer, right in the density of Parkerville, is improving the village appearance by dressing up his buildings in a new coat of paint; also adding temptations to the attractions of Brick Yard hill with his Mountain Rose peaches.

Joseph David Lafayette Mudgett of Westford, Vt., is making his abiding place with Clarence Revillo, Parker Decatur of Westford, as ploughman, milkman, harvester and general dandy, handy man. Plenty of name for fame.

John Adams Taylor has finished taking the school census and left town Tuesday noon for Miami university, Ohio. The census report shows 448 school children between the ages of five and fifteen—229 boys and 219 girls, a gain of thirteen school children over last year.

Arthur Warren of Chelmsford has moved his portable sawmill onto Oak hill and will soon commence cutting the pine lot recently purchased of Walter Emerson; also close by all the lumber on the Noah Shapleigh lot. The lumber on both these lots is in vigorous growing condition and necessarily small. Between unfortunate fires and premature cutting, Oak hill is no longer the beauty spot it once was. State forester Raine might profitably be introduced to encourage the reign of scientific forestry on this sky-towering hill.

It was regretted by all admirers of that plain, rugged, practical type of life characteristic of early New England, when it was learned that Rev. Benjamin H. Bailey, a physical, moral, social and spiritual type of this life, was ill and unable to resume Sunday services at the close of the vacation last Sunday. Besides the above class, who especially regret it, everybody does who ever knew him.

Labor day at the "Old oaken bucket" farm was observed with variety. Some went to the auto races, some stayed to the lawn tennis, some were worldly and grasped the plow handles, and clung to worldliness until retribution broke the plow point and the horses helped themselves with speed to stable recreation. Among those who sported on the lawn tennis court were Emerson brothers of Chelmsford, Rev. J. D. Sarlee of Hanover. Among relatives who helped and looked on were Amelia, Emily and Lyman Proctor of Cambridge, Mrs. Helen H. Taylor, Miss Bessie Dame and Miss Susan Hannaford of Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Snow of Chelmsford.

For a real picture of thrifty prosperity just cast your eyes sideways (unless you are cross-eyed) into the lawn farm yard of Charles W. Whitney and see that bright, shining, labor-saving machine only a few hours out from the manufacturer. This is the farm now where the planting will get the start of St. Patrick's day in the morning, and some of the other early birds will have to ride on the rear seat as passenger only. Some say it will be an airship next.

Rev. Benjamin H. Bailey is in town again after vacation season, and looking better in the behavior of his health, and the Unitarian church will open tomorrow, the twelfth.

The School Question.

For the first time in history the old Stony Brook school closed its doors for the period of a school term. Such was the case Tuesday when the autumn term of the schools opened, and the scholars of this ancient and honorable district were transported by electric cars to all that is modern and attractive at the William E. Frost school at the Center. The size of the tax bills this year does not seem to hint at depreciation of farm property, and the jolly, smiling good time of the scholars riding to and fro so far is a rebuttal of the foretold evils of transportation.

There is talk of an article in the next annual town warrant to build a new two-story schoolhouse at Brookside. As this is a manufacturing center, it has the appearance of wisdom and the writer is inclined to favor it, but let us be wise enough to profit by past experiences to know what we want and where we want it.

Within the space of a little over twenty-five years the town has built twelve new schoolhouses and closed six of them. The first new schoolhouse at Grantville was not what was wanted nor where it was wanted, and the second new schoolhouse was built. The first new schoolhouse at Westford Center was not what was wanted nor where it was wanted and a second new schoolhouse was built, so that we have gone all over the town once with new schoolhouses and have commenced to go over it the second time, so that building schoolhouses and abandoning them seems to keep us in a whirl of a stir all the time.

Solomon has a sermon on "With all thy getting get wisdom." Hadn't we better stock up with wisdom before we stock up with more schoolhouses.

Grange.

At the last meeting of the grange L. W. Wheeler occupied part of the lecturer's hour by some practical points and statistics on "Adulteration of food," and several members spoke briefly and wisely on "Farm life in the house." On the question of making an exhibit by the grange at the Middlesex North fair as by invitation of Chelmsford grange it was voted nearly unanimously not to exhibit. The dry weather conditions as affecting fruit and vegetables had much to do with the vote. At the next meeting of the grange next week Thursday evening Concord and Tyngsboro granges will be the invited guests and will furnish the literary entertainment. Supper will be in charge of the ladies' degree team of Westford, which is another name in part for excellence in abundance. Let there be abundance of attendance.

The trustees of Middlesex North society held a meeting at the American house in Lowell last week Thursday to make arrangements for the fair to be held at Chelmsford next week Wednesday and Thursday. Chelmsford grange has charge and promises a band of music day and evening, weather permitting, concert on the park; exhibition of fruit and vegetables at town hall, open day and evening; exhibition of cattle near the park; dinner and speeches at Odd Fellows' hall Thursday. It is hoped that the recent automobile promenade contest will not tend to side-track this ancient and honorable exhibition of what brains can do for the soil. The 19,000 acres that make the territory of Westford were once a part of Chelmsford. Let a few birthday remembrances be sent to this fair as a sort of "account of our stewardship."

Center.

H.; Miss Ruth Tuttle to Winthrop; and Miss Edith Wright to Ayer.

George M. Balch was at his father's over Sunday and Labor day.

Mrs. J. Henry Colburn and son Clarence are visiting her father, J. S. Nathans in New York city.

A number of patrons of Westford grange attended the first meeting of the season at Lowell, the North Middlesex Pomona, Friday, September 3.

At the William E. Frost school the enrollment of scholars is about 125, about twenty-five of this number being from the Stony Brook district.

Party.

Mrs. J. Herbert Fletcher entertained delightfully at her home last week Thursday afternoon, the event being a "shower party," in honor of her cousin, Miss Emma G. Holt of West Chelmsford. The guests were mostly Miss Holt's former classmates at the Lowell Normal school, and who are now teachers in various places, but for the time being happy school-girl fun took the place of the school-room dignity and the gathering knew not a dull moment. The shower of gifts was a miscellaneous one and it was a pretty collection, each offering enhanced in value with its accompaniment of loving good will. These were arranged in the white embroidered parcel belonging to the hostess, tied with white ribbons, ingeniously descending upon the blithe, fondly desiring recipient. Among these gifts were pieces of embroidered linen, china, pictures, etc.

At the close of this part of the festivities a luncheon was served at small tables on the veranda. This was screened in with branches of birch, studded with blossoms of hydrangeas. The centerpieces at each table were of sweet peas. The delicious menu was of chicken salad, heart-shaped sandwiches, ice cream, cakes and coffee. The place cards were of white hearts with dainty cupids.

After luncheon the guests were grouped on the lawn and had their pictures taken, and the prospective bride had hers taken separately in a chair trimmed with white ribbons. After this the guests took their departure with many assurances to the hostess of a happy time and to Miss Ruth Tuttle, who assisted Mrs. Fletcher in arranging this pleasant event.

LITTLETON.

Lawn Party.

Thursday evening of last week proved too chilly and damp for the proposed lawn party, so the place of entertainment and sale was changed to the Baptist vestry, which was sufficiently large to accommodate the good number present. Mrs. Marie Sanderson, who was to have sung, telephoned her regrets and inability to meet the engagement. An impromptu program was immediately planned by the powers to whom defeat is an unknown element, and included in its numbers selections by the Ladies' quartet, including Mrs. Webber, Miss Ethel Briggs, Mrs. Hartwell and Mrs. Priest; violin solos by Miss Katherine Kimball; piano solo by Miss Tenney; piano duet by Miss Tenney and Mrs. Webber, and a vocal duet by Mrs. Webber and Miss Briggs. All were applauded, and encores were requested, but limited time made them impossible. Ice cream, cake, candy and lemonade met well deserved patronage, and a sum of twenty-one dollars was netted. The money is to be donated to the cause of missions.

Birthday Celebration.

September 3, Orman Ewings celebrated his ninety-second birthday with his son, Frank A. Patch. Neighbors and other friends called informally, extended congratulations and left behind several material tokens of their regard. Among the gifts was a beautiful large birthday cake from the Forget-not-circle of Kings' Daughters. Mr. Ewings is in very good health and able to enjoy all these attentions. It was but a short time ago that he received the gold-headed cane from the Boston Post and two weeks ago his picture with a few biographical notes appeared in the Sunday edition of the Post with those of several New England recipients of Post canes.

Surprised.

A genuine surprise was given to Mrs. P. Corning Edwards last week Friday evening, when thirty-two Littleton friends by secret invitation from Mr. Edwards approached the veranda of the Ledges, prettily lighted by Chinese lanterns and the large hanging lamp. The entire party was at the door ready to be admitted without the slightest knowledge of their presence on Mrs. Edwards' part, and when she stepped to the door in response to a neighbor's request, a more surprised person could not easily be imagined.

After a short reception each member of the company was provided with a partner through twin couplets, evidently composition of the original host, and all enjoyed an hour or more of progressive whist.

Refreshments of ice cream, cake and candy were served, after which Mrs. Edwards favored her guests with instrumental selections that charmed her audience. The tables and chairs on the broad veranda were then removed and several couples lined up for Virginia reel. To describe that dance would exhaust the vocabulary of a Twain. If any person doubts the youthful jollity and fun of either participants or spectators, let him consult an eye witness of the scene. Everybody forgot that he was out of his teens until rising hour of the next morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwards and the kind neighbors who assisted them had every evidence of having provided a royal good time, which will always be remembered with delight by everyone present.

One day soon after her return home she was sent to find her little brother who was missing. Her search was unsuccessful and at last she went up on the roof to look for him. Soon her mother heard a crash and running to see what had happened she found the chimney had fallen over, with Annie underneath it. She was living when found, but died before she could be carried downstairs. This was sad news to those who had watched her gaining health and strength during her eight happy weeks in the country.

Among the holiday guests in town were Will Raymond and wife at R. Y. Nelson's; Alfred Goodearl and family at Ernest Davidson's; Mr. and Mrs. White at A. H. Hartwell's; Charles Lawrence and family and Mrs. Clarence Braman and baby at A. E. Lawrence's; Miss Laura Dyer at W. D. Parker's.

NEW SHORT STORIES

Prudence of a French Diplomat.

An amusing little adventure happened the other day to the new French prime minister, M. Briand. He paid an official visit to a little town in the southeast of France which is famous for its clocks and watches. The minister observed the local exhibition, and after the speeches the local mayor presented him with a magnificent chronometer made in the town.

"If your excellency will allow," he said, "we will keep the watch for a few days and regulate it."

M. Briand, who, though a Socialist, has a sense of humor, comes from the south of France himself and knows that promises there are not always kept. He knew, too, that a colleague had the same watch given to him last year, that it had been kept to be regulated and that it had not yet reached Paris. So M. Briand, prime minister of France, shook M. le Maire warmly by the hand, told him that he was a bit of a clockmaker himself and would enjoy putting the watch in order and would think while he did so of the kindness of the town which had presented it to him. M. Briand has discovered that the watch is an excellent timekeeper.—Paris Letter to Washington Star.

A Type Often Met.

George Gould was talking in the salon of the Kaiser Wilhelm II. of the queer characters met on shipboard. "There was never a ship yet," said Mr. Gould, "that did not have one person aboard who boasted eternally of the number of times he had crossed the Atlantic. Now it is thirty-nine times, now it is ninety-six times. Every ship carries invariably this one passenger who seems to have devoted his whole life to making a record for Atlantic crossings."

"I once heard a Detroit girl poke a little fun at a passenger of this type. He said to her:

"Do you know, this is my fifty-seventh crossing?"

"Is it?" she said indifferently. "It's my ninety-eighth."

"Really?" the man explained.

"Oh, yes, indeed," she answered, yawning. "It's an old story with me crossing the Atlantic now. Why, actually, I always recognize more than half the waves we meet."

Presence of Mind.

Mayor Stoy of Atlantic City was praising the remarkable efficiency of his corps of life guards.

"These men have presence of mind," he said, "the right kind of presence of mind, not the wrong kind—everybody has that."

"I used to know," Mayor Stoy continued, "an aged duck hunter that we called Old Presence of Mind."

"We called him Old Presence of Mind because he once went ducking in a sneak box with a friend. The bay roughened up, and the friend fell overboard. But as he was sinking in the icy water he managed to clutch with his chilled hand the edge of the frail little sneak box."

"The old duck hunter used to conclude this thrilling tale with the words:

"And, gents, if I hadn't had the presence of mind to unship an oar and whack him over the fingers I'd have been drowned, as he was."

The Country Cousin.

Glenn H. Curtiss, discussing aviation with a New York reporter, said, with smiling impatience:

"Really, though, your questions show a remarkable ignorance of the principles of flight. If you are going to report aeronautical things, why don't you read up aeronautics? Your questions, as it is, denote an ignorance equal to the westerner's."

"This westerner on a visit to his rich Pittsburg cousin came down to breakfast every morning with the same general question:

"How is things?"

"One-morning the rich cousin, his nerves being a little on edge, scowled a black scowl at this question and said:

"Why the dickens do you always say 'How is things?' Jethro?"

"Jethro looked surprised and hurt. 'Because,' he answered, 'I want to know how things is; that's why.'"

SIXTY YEARS A HARPIS.

Rosalie Spohr, a Figure in Berlin's Musical and Social Life.

One of the most interesting characters in the musical life of Berlin is Rosalie Spohr, the harpist, who is a niece of the great violinist Louis Spohr. She made her first appearance in public on Dec. 13, 1849, at a concert given by Jenny Lind. She attracted attention first because of her distinguished musical descent, but after the world had once heard her art made her famous.

There are few women before the public today who play the harp as virtuosos, although one sees them occasionally in the opera orchestras. So it is difficult nowadays to realize that Rosalie Spohr toured Europe in triumph. She found in Franz Liszt a devoted friend and, enthusiastic admirer, and he was proud to play with her at Weimar as well as give her the benefit of his artistic advice. Her career as a public performer ended after about six years. Then she became the wife of Count Sauerma, and the stage knew her no more. She still lives in Berlin, more than eighty years old, but enthusiastic in her devotion to the instrument with which she won the triumphs of her brief professional career. For three hours every day she practices the harp, and her technique has for that reason remained very complete for one of her age. Her talent was in a measure hereditary, since her aunt was a well known harpist in her day. It was through her playing that Rosalie Spohr, who had begun her musical life as a pianist, turned her attention to the harp.

A widow for more than twenty years, it has been her devotion to her art that has made life interesting to her during all that time. Her education was sound in the first place, for she studied for two years under the harpist Grimm, who allowed her to play in public at the end of that period, although it was one of his principles that a harpist should study for ten years. Countess Rosalie has been an intimate friend of the German royal family, and both Friedrich and the empress were delighted to hear her play. Nowadays she is a unique figure in the musical and social life of Berlin and an inspiration to the younger students, who see what a joy and consolation an art may be to one who has acquired it faithfully.

COOKING RULES.

Green Vegetables Should Be Dropped Into Salted Water.

If vegetables appear wilted they may be freshened by soaking them in cold water.

Perfectly fresh vegetables, however, may be cooked as soon as prepared.

Green vegetables should be dropped into salted boiling water and cooked very rapidly, but such vegetables as asparagus, spinach, beans, peas and corn should be cooked in as little water as possible, just enough to keep them from burning. Other vegetables, such as cabbage and cauliflower, should be covered with water and a pinch of soda added. In cooking onions they should first be scalded and the water changed twice during the course of cooking.

Spinach, if it is to be cooked immediately, may be washed in scalding water, which will remove the sand clinging to the stems much more thoroughly than cold water.

Green corn should not be washed. Some people prefer to boil it with the husks on.

Cabbage and cauliflower should be thoroughly washed and soaked head downward so as to remove any insects lurking inside them.

Every kitchen should have a scrubbing brush to be used exclusively for scrubbing vegetables. Potatoes, for instance, should be scrubbed thoroughly before they are pared; also parsnips and carrots.

In preparing beets do not break the skin before cooking them or all the juice will be lost.

In baking potatoes first scrub them well. Then grease them with a little butter applied on a piece of brown paper. Bake for an hour, testing one when they seem to be done by bursting it slightly with the fist. If the potato is soft and mealy they are ready to be served.

A little chopped parsley tied up in a small muslin bag will greatly improve the flavor of string beans.

Stewed tomatoes are improved by adding a little finely chopped meat and meat gravy; also a sliced onion fried in butter until brown. Stewed tomatoes are seldom cooked long enough and invariably have a raw taste. They should be cooked down until quite thick.

Torn Buttonholes.

If a buttonhole tears out lay a piece of closely woven tape back of it, stitch firmly in place, hem the old buttonhole to it neatly and then cut and work in the tape a new buttonhole of the proper size. An extra fine way is to rip the band apart and take out the threads of the old buttonhole, stitch the tape on the inside of the back of the band, stitch up the latter in its original shape and proceed as before. When buttons have torn out it is comparatively easy to squeeze a small square of good tape through the hole, lay it flat in the proper position between the two folds of the band and stitch it in place. Hem down the ragged edges on both sides and sew the buttons to the tape. Any button or buttonhole that is to bear the strain should be stayed with tape when the garment is being made, the stay tapes for both buttons and buttonholes being placed in the band before it is stitched.

Death.

Mrs. Myra J. Dix died at her home on Townsend Hill last Saturday morning, aged sixty-four years. She has been slowly falling since last spring with consumption of the blood.

The funeral was held at the Congregational church Tuesday morning, and the large attendance of relatives and friends testified to the esteem in which she was held. The Townsend grange, of which she has long been a valued and faithful member, and in which she held the office of Pomona, attended in a body. The service was conducted by Rev. F. B. Harrison, her pastor, and the grange service was also used at the grave. Mrs. Mabel Brackett and Mrs. Ethel Eldredge sang, "Safe in the arms of Jesus."

Are your Children's Eyes in the right condition for the commencement of the School Year? Do not allow them to be hampered in their school work by defective eyesight, when a pair of correctly fitted Glasses would remedy it. It is a matter of fact that in Chicago schools 60 per cent. of the school children suffer from optical defects. The proportion is probably about the same here. Baseball.
The Alerts played their last game of the season here on the afternoon of Labor day. In this game they were defeated by Nashua, 3 to 2, in ten innings. The game was close and exciting throughout, both playing glibly edged ball. The work of both Mason and Taylor, the two pitchers, was the feature.

They have finished a very successful season, winning nine out of twelve games and scoring ninety runs to their opponents' twenty-nine. Following are the scores:

July 10, Alerts 11, Town Team 1; July 13, Alerts 7, Ayer 1; July 17, Alerts 13, Peppereil 0; July 24, Alerts 14, Townsend 1; July 28, Alerts 8, Ayer 4; July 31, Alerts 4, Peppereil 0; August 7, Alerts 3, Leominster A. 2; August 14, Alerts 14, Wachusetts 0; August 21, Alerts 5, Nashua A. The fielding was exceptionally good, two errorless games being played and four one error games. The pitching staff, consisting of Mason, T. Donahue and Cook, was very effective and reliable throughout the season. The record was, Cook won 2, lost 0; Donahue won 1, lost 0; Mason won 6, lost 2. Donahue pitched the forfeited game with Calumets.

Next week the team intends to start the season earlier and have a good hard schedule throughout. The team will be the same as this year as far as possible. The game last week Saturday afternoon between the Calumets of Leominster and Groton Alerts was far from satisfactory. The victory lay with the visitors by a score of 5 to 2. The game was forfeited in the ninth inning to the visitors by the home team disputing the decision of the umpire.

A fine orchestra discoursed lively music, including popular national airs and Yale songs. Later the president received the guests, shaking hands and greeting each alumnus present. Trial Test.

The fire engineers purchased two of the Eastman nozzles, one and 1 1/4-inch, after a trial test. They cost fifty dollars apiece and are a good investment for the town, as they are much superior to the old nozzles and are far more efficient, as they throw a steady solid stream to the top of the highest building in the business portion of Main street before it breaks.

The trouble with the ordinary nozzle is that the stream breaks into a spray before reaching any height on a building.

The new nozzles were thoroughly tested last Tuesday evening, the fire department running out five hundred feet of hose and they worked to the entire satisfaction of all who witnessed the severe trial. They are a great addition to the department and more effectual in the extinguishing of fires.

Dr. Hopkins has purchased a new Buick automobile from E. O. Proctor. This makes the tenth one of these cars sold by Mr. Proctor this season. The doctor had a little accident last Saturday when he got the car. He cranked it, but for some reason the motor stopped and the doctor, leaving the throttle open, let it crank and it once more. This time the car went all right enough, but he was not in it, as it started before he could reach his seat. He had presence of mind to grab the wheel and turn his car in time to narrowly escape a pile of junk lying outside the driveway.

Clinton Fair.

The Clinton fair management this year proposes a fair September 15, 16, 17, that will be even more what the people desire than those of the past. The management will keep those features of former fairs that have been approved, whose commendation by the people has given assurance of value as drawing cards, and will add still others that promise to accord with the measure of excellence before being made permanent.

The management will award purses to the fastest horses in trotting and pacing events this year $1500, and to the runners an additional $200.

All entries for live stock will positively be closed on Friday, September 10, and all entries will close at six o'clock p. m., Tuesday, September 14.

The Battery B band of Worcester has the contract to provide musical pleasure for the patrons of the fair on the opening day. On the second day the Leominster Military band will provide the musical features, and "Horse show day," the big third day of the fair, the Marlboro band will do the honors musically.

The New System Working Well.

Train dispatching by telephone instead of by telegraph has passed its apprenticeship on one division of the Boston and Maine railroad, and so satisfactory are the results that ultimately every division of the Boston and Maine railroad will be equipped with a telephone train dispatching system.

The new system sounds the knell of the railway telegraph operator. An expert in telegraphy has no advantage over the man with good sight, a good ear and the ability to act quickly in an emergency.

The Fitchburg division of the Boston and Maine was selected some time ago for a try-out of the new system, which has demonstrated its success on western roads.

Its main line of track, fifty-one miles from Boston to Fitchburg, and embracing nineteen towns and stations, was made ready for telephone dispatching early in the month, but it was only last week Sunday that the actual operation of trains by telephone began.

The same routine of office goes on under the new system as under the old system of dispatching.

The dispatcher sits in his Boston office and gives his orders for conductors to stationmen, but instead of the click-click-click of the telegrapher's key, simply the buzz of a bell is heard and the voice of the dispatcher, giving his orders to the men in the stations.

These orders are repeated back and forth, just as under the old system of telegraphing, and recorded as before in the books of sender and receiver.

All orders for the movement of trains include the spelling out of train numbers and the time given and the station or tower designated.

"Train twenty-seven will wait at C-o-n-c-o-r-d," talks the dispatcher in Boston over the wire, "until passed by Train T-h-l-r-t-y from Fitchburg, due at T-h-r-e-e-F-o-r-t-y O-n-e."

And back from station or tower operator, the order is repeated, all spelled out as received, and then repeated over again.

Accuracy and promptness are insured more than under the old system of telegraphing, and the train dispatcher is in almost immediate touch with all the operators and station and tower men on his division.

The simple turning of a key in the office of the train dispatcher calls the station required, just as the putting in of a switch calls any department of a mercantile house from the office of the establishment.

The train dispatcher can give his orders and if necessary hold an extended talk with Fitchburg without waiting at all for the delay consequent upon using the telegraph. Railroad dispatching is brought by the telephone as near to the instantaneous as possible.

Station and tower men can also get the dispatcher in Boston simply by the pressing of a button, and in Boston the dispatcher sits at his desk with headpiece adjusted waiting as well for calls upon him through his receiver as to transmit orders himself.

The dispatcher, by the turning of a key, can cut out all stations except the one called or calling, but a bell contrivance gives warning meanwhile that other stations desire to talk to the dispatcher.

The apparatus used is a combined receiver and transmitter horn, set upon a swivel and on the desk of the operator, thus allowing the use of the hands for writing down the orders transmitted.

An ingenious contrivance for use in case of wrecks or where conductors or inspectors may desire to talk to headquarters of a division, consists of a portable pocket set, combining receiver, transmitter and wires. A wire may be tapped anywhere on the division and communication opened up through the train dispatcher with the main office of the railroad. The advantage of this contrivance in case of wreck or emergency, in the saving of time toward hurrying succor and in many events of "railroading" where time is the great factor, cannot be over-estimated.

"The telephone system of dispatching," says Superintendent S. A. D. Forristal, who has charge of all the telegraphy of the Boston and Maine system, "is a complete success. We run ninety trains a day on the main Fitchburg line, and since last Sunday all of these have been dispatched by telephone. The system has worked easily, accurately and perfectly. There has not been a hitch, and I can't see a chance for a hitch. The telephone will undoubtedly supplant the telegraph for train dispatching on all our divisions."

WALSH vs. BENNETT.

From the Lowell Daily Courier-Citizen, September 10, 1909:

Now that the dangerous part of carnival week is safely over, let us turn for a moment to questions of politics, and more especially to those affecting the fight for a senatorial position in the Seventh Middlesex district. It has come to your attention that the Lynn end of the district is being exploited vigorously by young Mr. Bennett of Saugus, who seems to think he ought to be nominated by the Republican party rather than Mr. Alonzo G. Walsh of Lowell, mainly on the argument of "locality." He has issued a somewhat self-laudatory circular to this effect, claiming that it is time the Lynn end of this most remarkable shoe-string district had its share of the representation, etc., etc. But let us see how far this will hold water.

To begin with, the Lynn end of the district hasn't been a part of the district long enough to acquire any sore grievances on the score of mere locality. It is a new hatched, unfledged comrade. The district was only made over so as to take in this remote corner of the world in 1906—so that for three long years Lynn hasn't had a senator to represent the towns of Ayer, Westford, Roxborough, Carlisle, Bedford and Billerica, not to mention a very important section of the city of Lowell.

Meanwhile Lowell, which has been a member of this district for a good many years, has gone without any representation for much longer than that. Looking back over the record, one will seek for many years before he finds anything that even looks like a Lowell name. Hon. H. E. Fletcher, as a matter of fact, came the nearest to being a Lowell man, and he lives in a town that doesn't even adjoin Lowell! The others, such as Brigham, Patch, Grimes and Clark, came from even farther away. On the score of locality alone, therefore, Lowell has a claim that is several hundred times stronger than Lynn's, simply because Lowell has been without representation much longer than Lynn has. Lynn has only just come into the family! Why, then, this sudden clamor to be recognized as if it were somehow a matter of right? Has not Lowell a prior claim?

Now, of course, locality isn't all there is to it. If a very strong man were asking this recognition in Lynn it might under other circumstances have some pertinence—but that seems not to be the case here. Mr. Walsh is a much better qualified candidate than Mr. Bennett can claim to be, and the district wants more than anything else a senator who will give it the greatest measure of influence. As between Mr. Walsh and Mr. Bennett we can see no possible comparison that doesn't redound to the favor of Mr. Walsh. He has never been honored by his party in any appreciable way, save by requests for hard work which has always been faithfully performed. Other things being more equal than they are, one might possibly turn to a locality argument to decide the matter—if the locality argument as applied to Lynn in this case were not so laughable in itself.

There are two things that matter with Mr. Bennett's claim at this time: (a) He isn't nearly as able a man as Mr. Walsh. (b) Lowell has a much better claim on the score of locality than Lynn has. The great bulk of the Seventh district lies up this way. Lynn has only been added to it for a year or two. And during all the time that Lowell has been a part of it, she has gone without any local senator. No, no! Mr. Bennett can't make any claim to this office as a matter of justice to Lynn and Saugus. And he can't make any claim to being stronger than Mr. Walsh in ability or equipment. Besides, he hasn't done half the thankless work for the party that Mr. Walsh has done many years before young Mr. Bennett entered the Lowell textile school. If the Seventh district has any sense of justice or proportion at all, it will turn a very deaf ear to the entreaties of Bennett of Saugus. By the way, isn't it possible for this state to get its law-making done without a Bennett of Saugus? And hasn't that particular claim had about all it can fairly claim in the way of political preferment for a while?

Care in Preparing Food.

In recent years scientists have proved that the value of food is measured largely by its purity; the result is the most stringent pure food laws that have ever been known.

One food that has stood out prominently as a perfectly clean and pure food and which was as pure before the enactment of these laws as it could possibly be is Quaker Oats; conceded by the experts to be the ideal food for making strength of muscle and brain. The best and cheapest of all foods. The Quaker Oats Company is the only manufacturer of oatmeal that has satisfactorily solved the problem of removing the husks and black specks which are so annoying when other brands are eaten. If you are convenient to the store buy the regular size packages; if not near the store, buy the large size family packages.

POLITICS IN STATE ACTIVE

Democratic Organization Stirs Republicans to Action

NOT TO BE CAUGHT NAPPING

The Income Tax Issue to Be Considered—State Already Assesses Such Tax—Representative Tolman Has Clear Field—Hill as District Attorney

There is apparently a good deal of activity now, both at Republican and Democratic state headquarters. It is beginning to be realized that there is to be an earnest campaign by the Democrats to elect James H. Vahey governor, and that a sharp canvass will have to be made to offset it. It is realized that the Democratic city and town committees have been organized in a pretty effective manner, such as has not been in evidence since the years when Colonel William A. Gaston was either running as the Democratic candidate, or was at the head of the organization and attempting to put the machine into thorough fighting trim.

One of the elements which always has made the result uncertain and hard to estimate in recent years is the labor vote. It is true that it has always been arrayed against Mr. Draper so far as it was possible for the leaders of the labor movement to control it, and that, so far as may be judged, it is the same situation this year as in the last four preceding it, but not all the labor men have ever voted against the governor. There is a deep suspicion among the rank and file of the labor army that the men who have engineered the fight against Mr. Draper are not sincere, and that some of them at least are trying to use the move as a political engine of their own selfish ends. The fact that they have never scored against him has disheartened most of the leaders.

Bounced in 1904
Labor men recall with some bitterness that they were urged to vote against Governor Bates because of his attitude on labor measures, and that they helped defeat him and elect William L. Douglas, only to find that Mr. Douglas as governor took almost identically the same attitude upon such bills as had the man they had defeated. The Democratic party had simply used the labor issue to elect their candidate, and when he had assumed office and taken up the burden of responsibility he found himself compelled to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor as a matter of public duty. It is mighty easy to promise any old thing when a man is a candidate for office without much hope of winning, but if an accident lands a man in office he has to think twice before acting, and consider all the people rather than a certain class.

Last year was presidential year, and there was a full vote cast. It cannot be expected that any such vote on either side will be thrown this fall. Just how much it will fall off is uncertain, but the Republican vote always shrinks more than the Democratic. Then there is the vote cast last year for the Independence league, now defunct as a political organization. That amounted to 23,000, and the Democrats claim the most of it. The Republicans think it will be split, the greater part going to the Democrats and perhaps a quarter of it finding its way back into the Republican fold.

Republicans are not claiming a tremendous majority this year, but they think there will be enough to elect Mr. Draper comfortably. He had over sixty thousand majority last year. Probably half of that would satisfy the party leaders this year. No presidential year majorities are looked for in off years.

Democrats Very Active
The activity of the Democratic state committee in perfecting its organization has set Republicans at work, also. By reason of this a sharper campaign will be made than was originally intended. It is not in the Republican plans to be caught napping, or sleeping at the switch. They are glad to know early in the season what the enemy is up to, so as to be ready for action.

It is expected that the state convention Oct. 2 will be a very enthusiastic gathering. There are over 1800 delegates, and with Governor John L. Bates as chairman of the committee on resolutions, and ex-Mayor Edwin U. Curtis of Boston as president of the convention, there will be oratory of a pleasing sort, and interest. It is quite probable that Senator Lodge will be present, and if so the delegates are not likely to let him get away without an important speech. There will be plenty for all the participants in the oratory to talk about, what with the special session of congress, the new tariff bill, the advancing wave of prosperity, and the record of President Taft.

There is a good deal of speculation as to what is being done in regard to the income tax. The great majority of the Democrats and some of the Republicans favor the election of men to the legislature who will vote to give the congress right to impose such a tax.

There has been no national income tax since Civil war times. It was adopted as a war measure, but relinquished after that. It is felt now that if once the right is granted the income tax as a national matter will come to stay. That, of course, would compel the states now assessing an income tax to relinquish it in favor of the national government. Massachusetts already lays such a tax, and it would diminish the state's revenues by so much to turn the right over to the nation. The state convention is expected to take some stand upon that issue. The Democratic party, having none of the responsibilities of providing revenue for the commonwealth, will put a plank in its platform in favor of the national income tax measure. There seems to be some doubt about the exact attitude to be taken by Republicans. In fact, it may not be considered necessary to take any binding action in regard to it, but leave it to the individual members of the legislature to act upon their own convictions. No doubt many of them would do so any way, regardless of the attitude of the state convention.

Minor State Matters
The decision of Senator James F. Shaw of Manchester not to be a candidate for renomination in the Third Essex district leaves the field to Representative James E. Tolman of Gloucester. He will be uncontested as a candidate. He has served as mayor of his city, and in the city government as well, and is a leading citizen of the district.

There is no opposition to the nomination of District Attorney Arthur D. Hill of Boston, on the Republican ticket, for a full term as district attorney. He was appointed to the place by Governor Draper when John B. Moran died, and has now served Suffolk county for several months, long enough, indeed, to put a number of men behind the bars for defrauding the city of Boston. The Democrats have two candidates for the nomination of that party, Councillor E. P. Barry and Felix W. McGettrick.

Don't Do It.
Dr. Weir Mitchell declares that women often talk themselves into a nervous collapse. "Talking," he says, "reduces the vital force. One has only to lose one's voice temporarily to find out how many unnecessary remarks one makes."

SICK HEADACHE CURES.

How to Relieve This Most Distressing Form of Illness.

Sick headache, while not dangerous, is one of the most disagreeable forms of illness. Some women are subject to it at such frequent intervals that they are incapacitated for several days at a time.

Unless the headache is known to come from some functional disorder it can generally be traced to impaired digestion or a sluggish liver. These must be treated in the intervals of the headaches, as at the time nothing but alleviating remedies are possible.

A treatment that is often successful is to abstain from red meats for a time and to be careful about taking foods that ferment easily. One man who had doctored for years for sick headaches was cured by his wife seeing to it that he drank a cup of hot water with a half teaspoonful of salt in it as soon as he arose in the morning.

A half lemon in a glass of cold water taken night and morning is another remedy that has proved helpful to many.

During the attack rest and quiet are imperative. Lie down in a darkened room, drink quantities of hot water and apply either a hot water bottle or an ice bag to the temples and the base of the brain.

Cloths rung out of hot water often bring quick relief. Headache cologne if rubbed on the temples in time acts as a preventive, while some sufferers are helped by taking a cathartic at the first symptom.

In severe cases five or ten minutes' treatment with an electric battery is invaluable. This is better than massage, as the pressure is sometimes too strong when the headache is bad.

In the first stages of sick headache it can often be averted by taking abdominal and neck exercises and by putting a mustard plaster over the stomach.

How to Make Kitchen Aprons.

To the woman who does her own work there is great satisfaction in a neat, well made apron, and such a necessary article may be easily and quickly made at home and prove much more attractive than the ready made ones.

An admirable apron is cut with a panel front that extends to the bust and fitted side girths that are finished with a band of buttons around the waist. A bias band around the neck is slightly shaped and buttoned to the panel front, but may be slipped on over the head without unbuttoning. There is a shaped pocket at the side, and if one is desired on the front at the bust it may be added. Denims and percales in solid colors or checked ginghams are usually chosen for work aprons, but for more elaborate ones dotted or crossbarred muslins are very dainty and launder well. The latter may be touched up with lace edged ruffles put on with heading through which colored ribbons are run, pockets set on with fine featherstitching or embroidery, and instead of the plain belt about the waist ribbon strings may be substituted.

How to Clean White Leather Shoes.
Soft white leather shoes can be cleaned in gasoline, and when not too badly soiled they clean nicely with almost any white powder. Pique or linen shoes should be washed, but often if merely dusty they can be cleaned with white chalk or flour. The regular white shoe polish can be used on them. A white polish is made with whiting and water, made medium thick and applied with a cloth. Rub the shoes free from dry powder after they have dried. Chamolis booties clean nicely in rather strong ammonia water. They should be washed in a suds with ammonia in it and rinsed in ammonia water and wiped dry with a towel. Do not dry chamolis near artificial heat.

How to Overcome Cooking Odors.
A volatile oil rich in sulphur is contained in onions, turnips and cabbage. When these vegetables are boiled this oil spreads over the surface of the water and sends its fumes to the far corners of the house. If the vegetables are soaked in salted water for an hour before cooking the trouble will be less. If they are kept at the boiling point for three-quarters of an hour, but not allowed to boil, they will become tender, yet their odor will not permeate the house. If boiling for a short time is preferred as a method of cooking, a crust of very hard bread dropped into the water for ten minutes will absorb most of the oil as it rises, when the crust may be removed.

How to Get Rid of Ants.
To get rid of ants in a kitchen use on the floor over which they have to pass a spray composed of coal oil, ninety-five parts, and crystals of carbolic acid, five parts; also spray their nest if it can be found. Persist in this treatment and they will leave the place. Do not get the spray on articles of food. The spray must be exceedingly fine. Several hand sprayers are on the market and are ordinarily used in distributing disinfectants. The vapor from this solution is fatal to the ants.

How to Prevent Rusting.
It is better to use wooden pegs in bathrooms or kitchens, where damp towels or cloths are apt to be hung; otherwise the linen may rust from the iron. If iron-hooks are already in place and it is not convenient to change them, give them a coat of white enamel paint. It prevents danger of rusting and is much less unsightly against the paper. If the linen has already been rusted it may be removed by rubbing with lemon juice and salt.

CHOICE MISCELLANY

The Price of an Egg.

Blanche Bates, who is a practical farmer, off the stage, tells a funny story apropos of two elderly negroes whom she recently employed to take charge of the extensive poultry yards she has established on her big farm near Ossining, N. Y.

These men, Noah Jackson and Alexander Johnston, are importations from Dinwiddie county, Va., a region famous for the cheapness and plentifulness of its eggs and poultry. Down there eggs sell in summer at anywhere from 8 cents to 12 cents per dozen and rarely ever rise higher than 15 cents in the winter. When they were told that Miss Bates' egg product commands a net price of 60 cents per dozen the year around at New York hotels and restaurants their sensations were first those of astonishment, then of incredulity.

The other day she overheard a conversation between the two men as they washed and packed a case of eggs for one of her prize customers. It ran something like this:

"Miss Bates wouldn't tell us a lie, you think, Noah?"

"I dunno, Mistah Johnston, whether Miss Bates is a truthful lady or not, but one thing I does know, and that is that any hen in the United States can afford to lay eggs for a cent apiece."—New York World.

Constantinople Women and Veils.

What does liberty mean to the Turks? Many things—chiefly the lifting off of a great weight of numbing fear. Men breathed freely. For the first time in thirty years they could talk, read, meet their friends, associate with foreigners and travel freely from place to place. "I have never lived till now," said a young Turk to me. Among the Turkish women the general emancipation produced its most extraordinary effect, but it was short lived. They threw off their veils; they came out from behind their close latticed windows into streets and public places; they went to theaters and cafes and drove side by side with men in open carriages. The more ardent spirits held an open meeting in Constantinople, at which the women who spoke demanded that the century old shackles be broken asunder. The thing was too novel to last. After a week or two remonstrances began. Carriages were stopped and some of the women roughly handled by the crowd. They felt instinctively that they had gone too far. They drew back. The veils reappeared—perhaps not drawn quite so closely as before. They were not always very closely drawn before.—From "Turkey in Revolution" by C. R. Burton.

Norwegians Are Cautious.

A good story of motoring in Norway is going the rounds. In many parts of this land of the Midnight Sun motorists are unknown and, thanks to the mountains, are likely to remain so. In the district in question a rumor went forth that a car was coming, and the authorities actually went to the trouble of issuing notices, which were posted about far and wide, warning all and sundry that such was the case. Not only were the people cautioned to give the car a wide berth, but they were told to remove their animals into safe quarters.

It so happened that the car was driven through a desolate land, much to the amusement or wonder, one fancies, of its owner. All the people were inside their houses, and all the cattle had been driven into safe quarters for the occasion.—Indianapolis Star.

Painfully Polite.

Lieutenant Shackleton in a speech in reply to the toast of his health told an interesting story of politeness in the untrodden regions of the antarctic. His party, he said, were always extremely good humored and polite, and one professor in particular attained a degree of politeness unusual under such trying circumstances. "Are you busy, Mawson?" he called out one night to another member of the party who was in the tent. "I am," said Mawson. "Very busy?" said the professor. "Yes, very busy." "If you are not too busy, Mawson, I am down a crevasse." The professor was found hanging down a crevasse by his four fingers, a position which he could not have occupied for any length of time.

Accounting For It.

Outgoing heads of the government departments sometimes make a few "personal" promotions upon the eve of their departure, and a clerk in the department of agriculture, believing that Secretary Wilson would go the way of the rest of the Roosevelt cabinet, ventured to approach him with a little plea for special recognition.

"I have been in the department since the time you were first made secretary"—the clerk began.

"I know it—I know it," the secretary said, waving him away. "Every one knows I am a very patient and considerate man!"—Harper's Weekly.

The Witty Duke.

A Chicago heiress was relating some of her experiences during the London season that has just ended.

"And at a dinner in Belgrade square," she said, "I sat next to the Duke of Devonshire. He is, of course, a very great swell. He has the manner of the swells of Du Maurier, a very bored manner, and in a sleepy drawl he says witty things.

"I can scarcely believe," I said to the duke, "that in your maiden speech in the house of commons you paused three times and yawned heavily."

"Oh, but you'd believe it," said he, "if you'd heard the speech."

OUT ON BAIL.

Strange Things to Which Running Over a Cow May Lead.

By HELEN MARDEN QUINN.
(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

"I'm going to fall in love with that girl!"

It was at a New England summer resort, and "that young man from Boston" had been there less than an hour when he had his first view of Miss Minnie Haddon. Young men from New York and other places had arrived a week ahead of him and uttered the same words, but as Paul Dillon didn't know it he was not dismayed.

To fall in love properly with the handsomest girl at a summer resort there should be a formal introduction, and a formal introduction may be hard to achieve under certain circumstances. There must be a mutual acquaintance to bring it about. Miss Haddon's mother was a widow and an invalid and kept to herself most of the time. Paul Dillon looked the crowd over twice a day for sight of faces he knew, but looked in vain. Four days passed, and the hotel did not take fire, the mountain behind it did not slide down, and there was no strike of waiters to give him an opportunity to play the hero and present his card. Then he decided to take a spin in the auto which had been shipped up to him.

When undecided what to do in a case of love, trust to the auto. It has a hundred possibilities.

Mr. Dillon had driven fifteen miles and stopped at a hotel to refresh himself, when he was pleased and surprised to see Miss Haddon and another young woman drive up in another auto. They had followed him from the hotel. They alighted and disappeared. By indirect information he learned that Miss Haddon had brought back the other young lady to her hotel and was to make the return trip in care of the chauffeur.

In the course of an hour Miss Haddon reappeared and after thirty or forty goodbyes to her girl friends took a seat in the tonneau and moved off. Three minutes later Mr. Dillon was traveling the same road. All went well for five miles. He was following so closely that he could see that the other machine was holding anything but a straight course. There were wobbles to right and left to signify that that tract on intertemperance that he had seen the chauffeur reading hadn't quite cured him of his thirst for highballs.

By and by two things happened in the same minute. The chauffeur suddenly increased his speed, and a cow suddenly started to cross the highway in front of a farmhouse.

The best mechanical engineer could not have planned things better. There was a whoop, a scream and a smash, and then an auto brought up against a rail fence and sent the splinters flying.

Fate was with the young man from Boston. He stopped his machine and leaped out and over the dead cow and the unconscious chauffeur lying on his back, and his strong arms were extended to the half fainting girl in the tonneau. She fell into them just as the farmer came from the house with a milk pail in his hand and cried out:

"Now, by crickets, but this is a nice state of affairs, ain't it! What in Jericho have you folks been doing?"

"This auto struck your cow," briefly explained Mr. Dillon as he placed the girl on her feet on the ground.

"Struck my cow? Why, it's killed her as dead as a doornail! By gum, but you've got yourselves into a nice scrape. Yes, sir; gone and killed my cow and smashed my fence, and the two things together will send you to jail for at least thirty days!"

"We shall pay all damages, of course. Please let this young lady go to the house. She isn't hurt, I hope, but the accident has shaken her up."

"Oh, she can go to the house. Look at that cow lying there! Only seven years old and giving ten quarts of milk a day! Worth $30 of any man's money. It's a serious job, my friend."

Miss Haddon was assisted to the house, where the farmer's wife received her, and then Mr. Dillon returned to the chauffeur. He had been dung out, but those highballs had saved him from serious injury. He was more intoxicated than hurt, and, after being propped up against the fence, proceeded to indulge in a good, long cry. When finally at liberty Mr. Dillon turned to the farmer and said:

"I am now ready to talk with you."

"Yes, there's got to be some tremendous talking over this thing. In the first place, I'm a constable, and it's my business to arrest somebody for speeding. If that machine hadn't been going thirty miles an hour the cow could have dodged it. I've been throwing stones and clubs at her ever since she was a calf, and she's dodged 'em all. It's speeding and killing a cow and smashing a fence all in one, to say nothing of the shock to my feelings."

"We are very sorry, of course," answered Mr. Dillon. "If you will figure up the damages I will pay."

"Waal, we'll call the cow $30 and the fence about $2. As for the speeding, you'll have to be taken before Squire Johnson. He lives six miles away, but is off on a visit to his brother in New Jersey just now, and I can't say when he'll be home."

"But we can't fool around."

"Can't you? Waal, I guess you'll have to. When you're talking to me you're talking to the law. I could handcuff the three of you and take you right to jail. Why, man, killing a cow is next door to killing a human being! Can't you realize it?"

"But, you see, we are stopping at the Elms hotel, and the young lady is anxious to get back to her mother. If I pay the damages you can take the bull on the speeding case, can't you?"

The constable thought the case over and decided to take bail. When Mr. Dillon pulled out his purse to pay the $32 he received a shock. Four dollars was all he had with him. The weeping and muttering chauffeur was searched, but he had less than a dollar. Blushing and stammering and perturbed, the young man called upon Miss Haddon for a cash loan. She had only $2.

"I hate to take you to jail," said the constable when informed of how things were. "I guess your watch and pin will be enough to secure everything. You've got to come back in a week, though, to face the squire."

"The things were handed over, the fuddled chauffeur loaded in like a bag of sand and the smashed auto left 'to be called for.' Then the other auto headed for the hotel. In the excitement of the hour neither of the principals had thought of names. It was only as they were rolling smoothly along at not too fast a gait that the error was repaired. Then a silence lasting five long minutes ensued. Then two peals of laughter broke from two pairs of lips in chorus. The whole thing was grimly ludicrous.

"And how did you raise the $32 and the bail?" asked the girl.

"The constable has my watch and pin."

"And won't we have to go to jail?"

"I think not, but we are prisoners in a sense. If you fly the country you will leave me in a bad fix."

Of course the mother thanked Mr. Dillon, and of course Mr. Dillon thanked his stars and pushed his luck. Once always and sometimes twice a day that couple had to ride out to see about bail; they had to wander about the grounds evenings; they had to sit in grooves and beside waterfalls. After a month had passed Mr. Dillon begged the mother to let him be a bondsman to the daughter for life.

"Dear me," said the mother, "but what strange things running over a cow may lead to! Don't let Minnie do it again!"

His Crushed Cigar.

"Yes," said the man with the open countenance. "I married a girl in the mutilated currency bureau of the treasury department at Washington. Quite a little romance it was too."

"How did it happen?" asked the man with the crumpled necktie.

"It was her deft fingers, her marvelous skill, that chiefly attracted me."

"Patching together ragged old dollar bills? Faugh!"

"Restrain your sarcasm, if you please. She could do much finer work than that. I had seen her once or twice and thought her a pretty girl, but was not particularly impressed. One evening, though, when I was calling on her at the boarding house where she lived I happened to notice that in some way I had crushed a twenty-five cent cigar in my upper left vest pocket, and I showed it to her."

"That's nothing," she said. "I can mend that and make it all right in a jiffy."

"It was a shapeless mass, but I told her to go ahead. She got a little paste, and in five minutes she fixed it up as good as new. Well, sir, that caught me, and I proposed to her on the spot. She said 'Yes,' and we were married the following week."

"Old chap," said the man in the mackintosh after a long pause, "how had you crushed that cigar?"

"That's none of your business!"—Chicago Tribune.

Corn Products Entrained.

The president of a western railway system was spending the week end at the country house of a friend in New York when one evening some reference was made by a layman touching the commercial greatness of the country as evidenced by railway operations.

"What you say is quite true," observed the head of the big system. "Do you know that if the corn products in this country for the last year were loaded into one train the engine thereof would be entering the state of New Jersey just as the caboose was leaving Los Angeles?"

At this remark a woman present could not suppress her astonishment and incredulity. "How you men do exaggerate!" she exclaimed. "You know very well that even two engines could not pull such a train!"—New York Tribune.

Preferred the Men to Talk.

A Philadelphia writer who belongs to the Society of Friends is a charming story teller. Here is one from his store of Quaker anecdotes.

"The story goes," he said, "that loud talking among the congregation once interrupted a certain Friends' meeting. The women at this meeting sat on one side of the room, the men on the other. The speaker when the talking became intolerable paused and looked at the audience reproachfully."

"A woman, rising, said to him: 'I beg thee to take notice that the talking you object to comes not from our, but from the men's, side of the house.'"

"The speaker smiled upon her. 'So much the better, good woman; so much the better,' he said. 'It will be the sooner over.'"

The census of 1906 gave Winnipeg, its capital city, a population of 90,000. There is nothing wild in a guess that its present population is not far from 120,000.

Many unsuccessful attempts to produce a noninflammable celluloid have caused new substances of the kind to be received with skepticism, but it is claimed that the cellite of Dr. A. W. Warde Fowler, who wrote "Social Life in Rome in the Age of Cicero," declares that the age of Cicero is one of the most important periods of Roman history and that the Cicero correspondence of more than 900 contemporary letters is the richest treasure house of social life that has survived from any period of classical antiquity.

Prince Rupert, the proposed western terminus of the new Canadian line, the Grand Trunk Pacific, will be a made to order city almost. It faces a fine natural harbor, yet a few years ago the land was held at a nominal price. Since the decision of the railroad was made known more than a million dollars' worth of lots have been sold there at auction.

Jet.

In his "Mirror of Stones" Camillus Leonardus calls Jet "black amber" and states that it possesses the peculiar property of attracting to it when rubbed light substances of all kinds. He also tells us that the thin smoke produced by this friction of rubbing was used by the ancient Britains for driving away devils and dissolving spells.

"Jet," says Dr. Young, "appears to be wood in a high state of bituminization." And certainly jet often appears with traces of ligneous structure. At the same time there are specimens of bones which seemingly have been gradually impregnated with and at last wholly replaced by this substance. Among the jet rock there is found a liquid hydrocarbon somewhat resembling petroleum oil, which occurs in the cavities of ammonites, etc., and is also sometimes found in nodules, the presence of which is generally supposed to point to a rich vein of jet.

From these and other observations it would appear that jet existed as a liquid substance and that this substance gradually permeated between the laminations of the shales, etc., covering over or in some cases entirely replacing any woody matter which it met with.—New York Post.

Snuff Spoons.

All the world is familiar with snuff-boxes, but snuff spoons are pretty little refinements of which this generation has hardly heard. Very probably they came into use about two years after Sir George Rooke's expedition to Vigo bay in 1702, when he captured half a ton of tobacco and snuff from the Spanish galleons and snuff thus became a common article in England.

One of the characters in a comedy published at Oxford in 1704, entitled "An Act at Oxford," by Thomas Baker, says, "But I carry sweet snuff for the ladies," to which Arabella replies: "A spoon too. That's very gallant, for to see some people run their fat fingers into a box is as nauseous as eating without a fork."

In the forties and fifties of the last century snuff spoons were still in use on the Scottish border. They were of bone and of a size to go into the snuff-box. People fed their noses, it was said, as naturally as they carried soup to their mouths. As late as 1877 a farmer at Northam-on-Tweed was seen using one.—London Saturday Review.

A Tramp of Resource.

Much experience of thirsty tramps had caused the author of "An English Holiday," J. J. Hissey, to foreknow almost exactly what they would say to him. One day, when sending his motorcar slowly along a shady English road, he met one of this guild, who accosted him with the preliminary touch of his cap. Mr. Hissey anticipated him by exclaiming:

"I be mortal thirsty! Have you, good sir, the price of a glass of ale about you? I've driven nearly fifty miles to-day, and since the morning not a bite of food has passed my lips."

The look of astonishment that tramp gave me was a delight to observe. But this tramp was a man of ready resource, and, seeing I was a hopeless case, he rose to the occasion and promptly exclaimed, with what dignity he could command and with a comically serious expression:

"If there were a policeman in sight I would give you in charge for begging, that I would!"

She was desperately gone on them both, and she couldn't think which one to choose. It was rather perplexing, no doubt, for one she was bound to refuse.

She gazed at them both in despair, quite puzzled to know what to do. As soon as she thought about one she cared for the other one too.

They still remained under her gaze, little recking the trouble they brought. It really was hard to decide. They were both so delightful, she thought.

She couldn't say which one she'd have; her efforts fell hopelessly flat.

It's really exceedingly hard selecting a new autumn hat.

He Told Her.

Housekeeper—You promised that if I'd give you a good meal and a suit of old clothes you'd tell me how to keep the premises free from tramps.

"Well, what course am I to pursue?"

"Never give 'em anything, mum. Good day, mum."

Good and Simple.

Let it not be in any man's power to say truly of thee that thou art not simple or that thou art not good, but let him be a liar whoever shall think anything of this kind about thee, and this is altogether in thy power, for who is he that shall hinder thee from being good and simple?—Marcus Antonius.

Dickens and Diet.

Dickens is the novelist of the meal. No other writer, ple be up never such lists of delicacies fit for Lucullus, has the gusto in describing humble feasts which gives the very reader an appetite. Thackeray, for all his "Ballad of Bouillabaisse," never touched the hem of his garments in the recording of meals. Who that has read them can ever forget, for instance, Mrs. Gamp's directions to the chambermaid for her nocturnal refectory, or the tea which twailed Joe Willett and Dolly on their return to the locksmith's dwelling on the occasion of Miss Migg's final rout, or the unassuming meals recorded in "David Copperfield," or the more pretentious feasts in "Pickwick," not forgetting the leg o' mutton "swarry" to which Mr. Weller was invited by the elite of Bath footmen? And has not every reader of "Martin Chuzzlewit" allowed a tender smile to curl his lips over the evolution of that incomparable pudding in the preparation and consumption of which such damage was done to John Westlock's affections? So go and read—and acquire your appetite.—London Chronicle.

Above and Below Proof.

Before the means of determining the true quantity of alcohol in spirits were known dealers employed a very rude method to form a notion of the "strength." A given quantity of the spirit was poured upon gunpowder in a dish and set on fire. If the gunpowder continued dry enough it took fire and exploded, but if it had been damped by the water in the spirits the flame of the alcohol went out without setting the powder on fire. This was called the "proof." Spirits which kindled gunpowder were said to be "above proof," those that did not set fire to it were said to be "below proof," but this did not fix the strength. Clark in his hydrometer, which was invented about the year 1730, fixed the strength of proof spirits on the stem, at the specific gravity of .920, at the temperature of 60 degrees. This is the strength at which proof spirit is fixed by act of parliament, and at this strength it is no more than a mixture of forty-nine pounds of pure alcohol with fifty-one pounds of pure water.—London Standard.

Case of Too Much Ham.

One morning not long ago there tripped up to a butcher stall in a Baltimore market a dainty little thing out for her first marketing.

"My husband bought a couple of nice hams from you not long ago," she announced.

"Yes'm," said the smiling butcher; "I remember well. Fine hams, weren't they?"

"They were delicious," said the young wife. "Have you any more like them?"

"Lots," responded the butcher, indicating a row of hams in the rear of the stall.

The young thing surveyed the hams thoughtfully. "Are you sure," she finally asked, "that they're from the same pig as that from which my husband bought?"

"Yes'm," answered the butcher without so much as a quiver of an eyelid.

"Then you may send me three more of them," she said.—Pittsburg Post.

The Caspian Sea.

The Caspian sea is, as Herodotus said 2,000 years ago, "a sea by itself, having no connection with any other." Every schoolboy knows that now, but it is remarkable to find Herodotus saying so, because centuries after his time such authorities as Strabo and Pliny believed that it was connected with the northern ocean by a long and narrow gulf. Geography seems to have had a setback in the interval through false information received at the time of Alexander's conquests.

Herodotus says that the Caspian's length was fifteen days' voyage with a rowboat, its breadth eight days'. Since the actual figures are 750 miles and 400, this shows that a rowboat of the time did fifty miles a day.—London Graphic.

No artificial rigs for me, no busted tires or bones, no landin' all up in a heap upon the highway stones. I may be slow a-gettin' round an' cause the world to stare, but I will git there by an' by all right side up with care."—Boston Herald.

Wedding.

The following from the North Adams Herald will interest the friends of Miss Provencher, who with her parents formerly resided here:

Miss Marie Provencher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Provencher of this city, and John Dion, a resident of Richfield, Conn., were married last week at Notre Dame church, the ceremony being conducted by Rev. Fr. C. H. Jeannotte, followed by the celebration of a nuptial mass.

The attendants were Desire R. Provencher and Miss Natalie Provencher, a brother and sister of the bride, the bride wearing white silk and her attendant blue silk, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses.

After the church service the bridal party went to the home of the bride's parents, where there was a wedding reception and repast. This was attended by the immediate relatives of the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Dion left for Boston. An abundance of wedding gifts were received by the couple. They will live in Richfield. The groom is an electrician there.

East.

It is of interest that the amount of water pumped each time into the standpipe does not make any perceptible impression at the wells. It will be remembered that it was prophesied that the test by Mr. Starr was not conclusive, and a very dry spell might find the supply exhausted. Everything to date is working satisfactory, and the department is hustling connections as fast as possible.

The new telephone directories are being distributed. The pages of instruction and suggestions are not only interesting reading, but of value to all who desire best possible service.

Between the hours of seven a. m. and noon of Monday, September 6, over 150 autos passed through Railroad square toward Lowell.

Earl Mention arrived Saturday evening to spend a few days at home. He returns to Franklin on Tuesday, where he is employed as baggage master at the railway station there.

Franklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Attridge, has been ill with chicken pox, but now almost fully recovered.

Mrs. Silvey, who has been so ill, is so much improved that her nurse, Mrs. Cynthia Lawrence, has returned to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Bullock spent the holidays with friends in Waltham, returning Tuesday.

Mrs. D. B. Perkins and Josephine of Malden are guests at Oak Hill farm of E. P. McCord.

Miss Edith Warren of Winchester spent the holidays with Mrs. Francis A. Lawrence.

Russell P. Wright returned Monday from his extended trip of vacation enjoyment to his duties at the store of Stenstream & Deloid's, Tuesday.

An entertainment will be given under the auspices of the L. B. S. of the Congregational church in Prescott hall, Thursday evening, September 23. Willard Gorton, the entertainer and modeler in clay, will present unusually fine character studies in costume, also cartoons in charcoal. Tickets on sale at C. D. Hutchinson's store, beginning Thursday, September 16.

Rev. Frances E. Webster of Waltham, who has his summer home here, and Henry C. Gray, took an auto trip recently. Their destination was Dorset, Vt., where they enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Gray's sisters. They also visited Rutland, Bellows' Falls, Keene and Chester, thoroughly enjoying the beautiful scenery and un surpassed views. They returned by way of the Berkshires, and the last of their journey was even better than the first, showing off the delightful valley views in their best harvest time appearance.

The cane given by the Boston Post to the oldest resident of South Poland was presented to Daniel Hackett by F. B. Shackford, chairman of the board of selectmen. Mr. Hackett is 92 years and 8 months old. He has planted and cared for three-fourths of an acre of hoed crops unaided this season. When Mr. Shackford presented him with the cane he found him busily engaged in cutting bushes. He is certainly one of Maine's smart old men. Mr. Hackett was the father of Mrs. Fayette Bicknell, a former resident of this town.

George Raymond of East Groton met with a painful accident Monday morning while harnessing the horses to a farm wagon. One of the horses started suddenly as he was hitching the tug and it caught the end of his finger in such a manner as to cut it clean off. Dr. Lovejoy dressed the wound and at this writing everything is again normal with the exception of a shorter finger.

Elmond Hodgkins has closed his lunch room on Tarbell street for a few days on account of two cases of scarlet fever in his home.

Mandana M. Hodgkins, daughter of Elmond Hodgkins, was discharged from the Boston city hospital, August 25. She has been in the hospital since May 11, and has had several serious diseases while there. At present she seems to be regaining her former health.

Rev. Dudley Childs will occupy the pulpit of the First Parish church of Pepperell on Sunday, September 12. He has accepted the call of the church to become its minister. Sunday school will reopen at usual hour, 12.15.

Reports from Allan McElhinney, who was obliged to go to eye specialists for an operation, are that the work was successful, and although it may be some little time before he returns home, it is expected this operation, which is the third undergone this year, will bring permanent cure. During his absence Mrs. McElhinney has full charge of the large poultry plant and is assisted by Robert Ripley.

Roger Robbins is assisting at the farm of Mrs. Lucy Perry during his vacation, but expects to return Monday to his studies at Dean academy. Very fine reports have been received of this boy's work and ability shown at this school. It is rather significant that he left our high school with his course incomplete, and this is just the kind of a pupil that would bring glory to any school.

It is understood that E. F. Harmon of this town was one of the prominent speakers at the Worcester-Middlesex Pomona grange, which met at North Leominster Wednesday. His talk was on the relation of the bread line of New York city to the farmers of New England, and was decidedly interesting and instructive.

George H. Swift's closing-out sale still continues and at ridiculously low prices for the stock. Mr. Swift states that he must sell the balance in a few days, and these low prices are the result.

Joseph A. Welch, age thirty-six, died at his home at North Pepperell, about ten o'clock, Wednesday evening, while sitting in a chair. Heart failure was the direct cause. He was born here and lived in town all his life, working on the farm of W. C. Perry, and was considered one of the best butchers in this section.

The trip to Mt. Uncanogoc and its popular delights has attracted many from here this season. On Tuesday a party of jolly ones enjoyed the day, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Durant. Among them we noticed Misses Wilson, Lillian Frost and Helen Robbins, Joseph Wiley, E. Boynton and Fred O. Bennett.

Mrs. Theresa (Wickzell) Wood of Shirley and Miss Florence Page, Syracuse, N. Y., were in town Wednesday, calling on their many friends and old-time acquaintances. It has been a long time since they have seen this, their native town. And it is understood they hardly knew the town with so many improvements and changes.

Forrest Winch is now considered one of the luckiest persons on record. On Tuesday he lost a pocketbook containing almost thirty dollars and other valuables. It was found by A. S. Woodward and returned to its owner. Thursday morning he again lost the same article and within an hour it was returned to him.

Dr. Percy Miller has returned to his practice at Harwich, Cape Cod, having spent a few days at his father's, Charles H. Miller. Miss Hannah Wilson of Shirley was also a recent visitor in town. It is understood that wedding bells will be heard at an early date.

Master Dana Merrill, son of Otis A. Merrill, Oak Hill, enjoyed a trip to Lowell Wednesday and witnessed the auto races, returning home Thursday evening.

Miss Lena Brown, Cottage street, is spending the week with Miss Helen Baker at Hollis, N. H.

Miss Audrey Haskell has returned to her home in Roxbury after a visit with Mrs. Frossard, Cross street.

Mrs. Albert Baker and daughter of Hollis, N. H., were guests of her sister, Mrs. L. H. Bean, Cross street, last week.

J. Irving Merritt of the Boston Divinity school, favored the M. E. church with a very interesting service Sunday morning.

The regular meeting of the Warrens at their hall Tuesday evening was of the live variety. It was voted not to attend the Brockton muster, but to put extra push, pull and pump into the Townsend muster, Saturday, September 18. New blood was administered, as two new candidates were elected to membership. It is not only hoped, but it is felt certain, that all will heartily cooperate for victory. There will be a practice meet Monday, September 13, and if weather is bad, the first fine evening following. All who wish conveyance to Townsend and return should secure passage by L. P. Shattuck or L. G. Robbins.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Parker, Miss Louella Parker, Mrs. Nellie Gutterson, Mrs. Minnie (Dane) Green, E. F. Harmon, Mrs. L. E. Starr and Blanche Pansy Howe attended Pomona grange at Leominster Wednesday.

Mrs. L. E. Starr, Misses Howe and Farnsworth attended grange meeting at Hollis, last week Friday evening. It was neighbors' night and a visit was enjoyed from Milford grange, who furnished the entertainment. The other features were supper and dancing.

Mrs. Anson Bolte and family from Chicago returned home Saturday, having spent the summer with Mrs. Jennie L. Williams, Oak Hill.

Mrs. H. W. Shattuck is ill at her home with neuralgia.

Misses Alice and Maud Chinn went to Revere Monday for a visit with friends.

Beulon.

The Chapman family held their annual reunion at Grange hall, Friday, August 27. The number present was smaller than any year, but it was unanimously voted to meet next year at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Tucker, Head street. Town relatives please notice and remember when next August comes to meet there.

The gathering was a success, with plenty of good things for dinner, and a social hour afterwards. Francis Lawrence, grandson of Silas Chapman, was again made president. Letters were received from many of the distant relatives. A telegram from Dr. Francis Chapman and Miss Bertha Lawrence was received late in the afternoon.

Death.

Mrs. Sarah Reid, wife of Amos L. Reid, died Friday evening, September 3. Mrs. Reid was taken violently ill Thursday noon and lingered till the next day, when she quietly passed away. She was aged 67 years and 6 days. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon at her late residence, and Rev. Mr. Merritt of Boston officiated.

The singers were Miss Beatrice Wallace and Miss Laura Herrig, who sang "Nearer my God to thee," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Mrs. Reid is survived by a husband and a daughter, Mrs. William M. Ferden of Sudbury, and a grandson in West Groton. The casket was covered with beautiful flowers. Roland H. Blood conducted the funeral, and burial was in Sudbury cemetery, Monday, September 6. Following is the list of flowers:

Card; spray purple asters from Ladies' Aid society; white pinks, lilies and asters, Mrs. Dow; beautiful spray of mixed asters, Mrs. Weston and Miss Abble Lawrence; spray purple asters, Mr. and Mrs. David Reid of Fitchburg; spray of white asters, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Ferden of South Sudbury.

Unclaimed letters at East Pepperell post-office September 8: Miss Guelte Dutra, Mrs. Julia Leucas, Harold J. Rolsten, Irving N. Weed.

Michael Sullivan.

Obituary.

News of the death of Michael T. Sullivan while attending a dance at Groton last week Thursday seemed at first incredible to his many friends, who had only a few hours previous seen him in robust health and enjoying the few hours of recreation. "And our hearts like muffled drums are beating, funeral marches to the grave." And the hearts of his companions in the evening's jolly time were like a flash changed to sorrow and mourning. He was only twenty-three years of age, of bright, cheerful temperament, a favorite with all and had hosts of friends. Never in this town has a greater number paid respect to a departed friend.

The funeral was Sunday afternoon from St. Joseph's church, but all through the interim of days friends called and the floral tributes were lavished in quality and quantity. He was a fraternal man. Council 317, K. of C., Court Pepperell No. 41, F. of A., Division 29, A. O. H., attended in a body and choice set pieces were brought by them; also the Warren veterans and hook and ladder company, all of which enjoyed his membership. The pall bearers were Michael Morrissey and P. Flynn of the A. O. H.; Thomas Drummy and Frank O'Toole from K. of C., Michael S. Sullivan and John J. Sullivan of the Eorsters.

Friends from Boston, Natick, Nashua, Groton and Ayer were present to pay last respects to their departed brother.

His father, two sisters and one brother survive him, and the best measure of his character is found in the attachment of these sisters, whose grief seems unconsolable.

Baseball.

The baseball game with the Ayer team Saturday was a hummer. A ten inning game resulted in a win for our home team, score 8 to 7. The game was closely contested from the start. The features were the playing of O'Toole and Tune, batting of Cushing, O'Toole and Bartlett, Lawrence, O'Neill and McCord, who hit in the tenth and stole second and third was able to score the winning run on Cushing's sacrifice. Following is the score:

The game Monday, September 6, with Townsend Independents resulted in a victory for the visitors, 8 to 2. Much criticism of decisions by the umpire causes a general opinion that a closer game would have resulted from correct judgment. However, our boys were not greatly disappointed by defeat, as the team was unusually weak, on account of a better team going from this town to Milford that day. A good game is looked for Saturday, September 11, when our braves will play the crack A. A. team of Townsend on their grounds. Game at three o'clock. The assistance of several old timers will aid our team.

SHIRLEY.

To become a Nun.

Miss Annie McCool, a former resident, recently visited her friend, Mrs. Margery Richardson of Fredonian street. Miss McCool left here seven years ago at the age of fourteen years and entered the Wellesley Catholic academy, from which place she graduated this summer and has gone to Halifax to be a sister of mercy and will later become a nun. Besides being thoroughly trained for her duties as a sister of mercy, Miss McCool has become an accomplished musician, and can speak French and German.

Many of the old Shirley residents remember her and are pleased to hear of her success in her preparation for her life work.

Miss McCool possessed a good supply of natural characteristics essential and invaluable for the duties of a sister. She will always be remembered for her kindly and self-sacrificing disposition as a girl and from early youth always had a strong desire to be a nun and in this she sought the aid of her aunt, Miss Maggie Conley of Newton, who cheerfully paid all her expenses at college.

Miss McCool's parents died here in Shirley and it was after their death that she made a determined effort to enter college. Miss Margery Richardson, who was much impressed with her beautiful young life, offered Miss McCool a home with her when her parents died, but she refused and pleaded with Mrs. Richardson to send for her aunt, Miss Conley, who came to Shirley and was convinced of the girl's sincerity and took her to the Catholic academy at Wellesley.

Accepted Another Position.

Wilbur S. Beaman, who had been engaged to teach the high school for another year, arrived home from his vacation Monday morning, September 6, and notified the school committee that he had accepted a position at Windsor Locks, Conn., and wanted to leave here at once. However, he agreed to remain a week to give the committee an opportunity to secure another teacher.

The school committee has been unfortunate this year, as Mr. Beaman is the second one who has broken his agreement.

John C. Davis of Dighton was engaged and accepted the position as superintendent of schools and he also later declined to come because he had been offered more salary to remain in the Dighton district.

Mr. Beaman, in an interview, said that he was very sorry to give such short notice in leaving Shirley, but he felt it was his duty to accept the position at Windsor Locks, and while he did not care to state the salary he was going to receive, it was considerable more than that paid in Shirley, and furthermore, he was going to have three assistants, and besides the equipments of the school were more modern and the school itself was considered one of the finest for the size of the town in Connecticut.

Mr. Beaman's salary here last year was $900, and the committee had this year raised that figure to $950.

The school committee are now endeavoring to obtain a high school teacher that will fully meet all the requirements of the position.
